CORAL GROWTHS ON SUB-MARINE CABLES.

Submarine cables have before now rendered unexpected services to science, and the following is one of the latest: Very little, it seems, is as yet known as to the rate of growth of corals, but some very interesting details have been published by M. Alexander Agassiz in the August number of the Bulletin of the Museum of Comparative Zoology at Harvard College with regard to a series of specimens which were taken in June, 1888, off the Havana and Key West cable, from a portion repaired in the summer of 1881; so that the growths could not be more than about seven years. It must be noted that this portion of the cable was laid at a depth of only from six to seven fathoms. and that the district in which it was laid was most favor-THIS FIRST-CLASS FAMILY ably situated as regards food supply to the corals. Some of the specimens belong to species whose rates of growth have not yet been recorded. Verrill mentions that the thickness of the Orbicella an-Special arrangements for monthly years was not more than about 8 years was not more than about 8 inches; the specimens from the Havana cable grew to a thickness of 2} inches in about seven years. Manicina areolata has grown to a thickness of 1 inch; while Isophylla dipsacea shows a still more rapid growth, projecting 21 inches above the cable. Of course it is quite possible these corals are of less than seven years' growth, but it is not probable that more than a short time passed before some of the swarms of pelagic coral embryos which must have floated past the cable found a place of attachment thereon .- [Electrician. in Russia: "Official: You cannot stay in this coutry, sir. Traveler: Then'll leave it. Official: Have you a permit to leave? Traveler: No, sir. Official: Then you cannot go. I give you twenty-four hours to make up your mind as to what you shall do."
